Pastor Says

SAYING SO

The late Dr. W. Hersey Davis, Professor of Greek New Testament of the Southern Baptist Seminary, Louisville, Kentucky, while waiting for a gas service attendant to service his car, saw an outstanding scientist also waiting. Without introducing himself to the man he began a conversation with him about the atomic energy plant he was directing. As Dr. Davis asked questions and the scientist answered, the man noticed that there was a puzzled expression on Dr. Davis' face. He said, 'mw friend, I do not believe I am retting through to you. I don't believe you know enough about atomic energy for me to explain it to you.' Dr. Davis replied, 'Mr brother, I can understand anything you can explain.'

Is not this our problem? Many of us haven't been telling others about our exrerience with the Lord, we haven't worked on the job sufficiently to tell others. We have difficulty in 'Seeing So', making it understandable to our associates.

One probable reason is that we have not clarified our experience with the Lord. We haven't tried often enough, or perhaps have never really put down to our own satisfaction just what Christ means to us.

It is true that life is terribly complicated and involved, so that we suffer from no single motive. But we can and must learn the art of 'saying so' if our witness is to be intelligent and effective.

Then, we may be guilty of saying one thing and living another. This confuses the non - Christian no little. Especially if one is seeking to find the answer to this own need. The Psalmist and Israel had a varied and dotted history. They had had many tragic as well as happy relationships in the course of their history. But the writer comes to a conclusion in Psalms 107, 2 that we ought to 'Say So' if we have been with the Lord.

Most of us realize that much of the difficulty in today's world is due to the lack of proper communication. The home life, church relationships and community progress is often stalled or stopped because of the lack of communication. People just don't seem to get through to each other. Maybe this is due to a lack of 'rapport'. If so then we must make the proper identification with God and our fellowman. This comes about when we identify with Christ. His Church offers the best channel I know for this identification to take place.

The Psalmist is 'Saying So' about some very wonderful things. He talks about the goodness of God, His wonderful works, the satisfying of a longing soul; and bringing him out of darkness to the marvelous light.

Why do we so readily communicate the bad, the ugly, that which tears down? Why don't we talk more about the positive things in life. Dr. Norman Vincent Peale of New York has built a ministry on this attitude. He has glossed over some things; I am sure, but he has had a very effective and useful ministry. So much so, that a film is being prepared on his life.

Could it be that we live negatively? If so we can reverse this pattern. We can change the trend to 'saying so' about the best things. I recall on the Mery Griffin show, that for about a month, he had a relired lawyer who had gone to a lot of trouble and research to dig up some of those human interest stories which accentuate the good, above side of life. It made an abiding impression on man judging from the mail received. He simply found out about some good thing and said so' where he had the opportunity. Once this attitude is taken and we begin to communicate it to others we will find that 'saying so' will cease to become a chore, and become a happy experience.

'Let the Redeemed of the Lord say so.'

Millner Receives Award For Dairy Farming

Ronald Millner, a junior in the Appomattox High School, has been named to receive the area award of the Future Farmers of America for dairy farming. Millner, 18, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Millner, of Appomattox.

Ronald is conducting a well-rounded student farming program of seven enterprises. In partnership with his father, he has a substantial investment in dairy animals, buildings, and equipment.

During his four years in vocational agriculture he has served as treasurer of his chapter and was a member of four committees. He placed second in the 1963 Area FFA Public Speaking Contest.

His work in dairy farming will be considered along with that of other area winners for the state award. Presentation of the state award will be made during the Annual FFA Convention at Blacksburg, June 17-20.

If God Cares

Lesson for June 9, 1963

God cares for His own. How often we have heard that! But there are millions of people who don't believe that at all because they are convinced that if God cared for them He would do something about it. The trouble here is not with God. However strange His ways may be, we cannot conceive of Him as a cruel or uncaring Creator and Crusher, one who delights to destroy his own creatures. The trouble here is with people, just like ourselves, or perhaps actually ourselves. There may be people who could have believed in God if it hadn't been for us. That is a terrible thought, but don't throw it away just because it hurts. It may be true.

If He Cares, We Must

If God is our God (and we like to claim Him) then if He cares for other men, so must we. No use talking about ourselves as God's children if we make no effort to be and do like the true Son of God. If the Father in heaven is concerned over what happens to any human being, even the least; if our divine Father notes even a sparrow's fall, then the least we can do is to share His concern. Now it is not psychologically possible to have exactly the concern for people that God has, for one simple reason. His mind is infinite and ours is not. For example: Suppose a big airplane crashes somewhere in Peru. You read in the papers the list of American passengers. All strangers. So you breathe a little sigh of relief—"Nobody I ever knew." And off you go to business or pleasure and never give that crash another thought. Is this sinful? Partly so; but one big reason why we can't feel desperately sorrowful, maybe not even a tiny bit sad over the crash, is that our minds just can't grasp it. Every minute or so some one dies, and that death means sorrow for some one, perhaps for many; and if you felt all that grief yourself, you would be crushed by the continual burden.

If We Care, We Must Help

One writer in the Bible, Saint James, makes fun of people who tell people in trouble, "Go in peace, be warm and fed," without doing anything to make the wish come true. A benediction is not a happy substitute for a breakfast. Caring about people is not a matter of emotion, feeling sad when they get into trouble and dancing with them when they are gay. If you do actually care for people, you will go to some trouble to help them out of trouble. A person who is helpful only when it's convenient won't be much help, and not very often. It's hard to believe in God when the people who sing (and even holler) about Him act like the devil. It's hard to believe in God if people who do claim to believe in Him act as if they had not even read His Book. God is being made a credible or incredible every day in the world, by the people who bear His Name.

The Shape of Love

If we ask a blessing before we eat, the usual way is to thank God for the food which is spread before us; and at breakfast we may also thank God for a peaceful night. Now it does not make God's glory or goodness a bit less if we remember that without the aid of people we would have neither the food nor the comfortable night. Somebody planted the seeds of what you eat, somebody raised the chickens and the pigs and cows, somebody planted the wheat for the bread; and somebody knew how to cook. So with the peaceful night. Policemen kept it peaceful, so did the army and navy, when you come to that. So did the good cook; without her (or him) you'd have had indigestion and a night you couldn't feel thankful for. The personal God uses persons to help persons; that is the way God operates. We surely would not want it otherwise. That is true God's helper is the happiest opportunity of life. Not that we are like the tools of a machinist. God does not use persons as you use a pencil. God uses only those who are willing and ready to be used.
